Journal of Basketball Studies

Journal of Basketball Studies looks at basketball like no one else can. It applies math and science to the game to help determine what makes a good player, a good coach, and a winning team. It is ideal for students to learn math, but it also introduces scientifically publishable techniques for analyzing how individuals interact.

Longview senior and Tyler Junior College signee Jason Bush was named the district's top defensive player, and Lobo sophomore Phillip Washington earned first-team status with the release of the District 11-6A All-District Boys Basketball Team for 2017-18.

Basketball Food Journal – Keep One & Get Ahead In The Game

A basketball food journal, also known as a food log or food diary, is a daily form that serious players in basketball training use to track your nutrition intake over a set period of time. I believe that all basketball players should keep a daily food journal for at least 2 weeks out of every month, if not just making it an ongoing part of their basketball nutrition strategy.

Exploring Game Performance in the National Basketball ...

Recent player tracking technology provides new information about basketball game performance. The aim of this study was to (i) compare the game performances of all-star and non all-star basketball players from the National Basketball Association (NBA), and (ii) describe the different basketball game performance profiles based on the different game roles.
